

In forging his chain of evidence Prosecutor Stickler lays especial stress on the pains Condon went to let every one know that he was leaving New Brunswick for his war duties on Friday night. He even went so far, Mr. Stickler asserts, as to call at the office of one of the local newspapers and request that the hour of his departure be duly chronicled in the issue of last Friday, the day of his call. He visited many of his friends and bade them good-by and spent much time about the city.

This was brought out when Dr. R. L. W. Whittur, temporary chief of the food conservation committee, at his recent presentation, addressed a gathering of 100 women to-day representing the principal women's organizations in the country. Many of them were present in various ways in which the people of the United States would be asked to conserve food materials.

Dr. Whittur called to the attention of the women the vast amount of starches that might be conserved for food purposes if the starch that annually is used in the manufacture of paper were diverted to the kitchen of the American housewife. He indicated that the next social season may witness soft shirts and neckties made of starch—possibly built on the lines of the sport collar—as the style de rigueur. These women also will be hit by the new rule against wearing hats of heavy starched tulle, ribbons and feathers.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—A pamphlet entitled "How the War Came to America" and intended as an answer to the question, "Why did the United States go to war?" is to be published soon by the Government's Committee on Public Information.

It will be bound in the national colors and will contain among other things three notable war addresses of President Wilson. It will be the forerunner of a series of "Red, White and Blue Books" to be put out as the war progresses.

The pamphlet, now in the press, will be translated into many languages and circulated broadcast.

The present dominating question, according to Mr. Hoover, is whether or not the scientific conservation of the national food supply is going to be maintained and carried out to the benefit of America and its allies and whether the present shortage is going to be carried into the year 1914.
